

The Johns Hopkins Society of Scholars honors individuals who completed their graduate, postdoctoral, professional or performance training at Johns Hopkins, but are not currently affiliated, and who have achieved marked professional or scholarly distinction in their fields.

Eligibility (NOTE: Criteria have changed significantly as of 2018-19. Please read carefully.): Nominees must have been in residence at Johns Hopkins University for at least one year and must have been separated from JHU for at least 5 years prior to the nomination deadline of the current year. All graduate and postdoctoral alumni are eligible. Peabody post-baccalaureate performance alumni are also eligible. The selection process will favor those for whom training at Johns Hopkins was clearly instrumental in launching their outstanding, independent careers.
